Media Outreach Tips

Send Press Release to Local Media

PRC will highlight your award as part of our national press release announcing the 2026 Excellence in Healthcare Award recipients, but there is an opportunity to secure additional local awareness and media coverage by issuing a press release to area publications and news outlets.

Download the fill-in-the-blanks press release, which you can customize and tailor for your organization. Contact your local news editors and journalists, especially those who cover healthcare or who have previously covered your organization. If you are including event information in the press release, be sure to send the release to your media contacts at least one week prior to the event so that they have ample time to assign the story to a reporter and possibly a photographer.

Distribute a Press Release Over the Wire

You can also distribute your press release using a wire service like BusinessWire or PRWeb, which will send your news to an extended network of outlets and journalists.

Send a Letter to the Editor

Consider writing a letter to the editor of your local newspaper or penning an op-ed in which you thank your employees and the community you serve. Not only could this secure media coverage, but it also reinforces the positive relationships you have been building in your community.

In the letter, explain what receiving a PRC Excellence in Healthcare Award means to your organization and how it will help you improve healthcare in your region. It's best for this sort of communication to be bylined by the hospital president or CEO, rather than a public relations representative (even if a PR person ghostwrites the letter).

Community Communication Tips

Host an Open House

Invite patients, staff, community figures, local business leaders, and the media to an open house to celebrate your organization's achievements and showcase your facility. Take photos so that you can send pictures to media contacts who were unable to attend the event.

Leverage the Award to Recruit Top Talent

Your award can help you attract talented staff by gaining credibility among potential recruits. Call out your organization's award in employment postings on job boards and recruiting sites. Further, consider the above open house as a particularly successful strategy for recruitment.

Send a Letter to Your Patients

Consider using the template below to send a thank you email to your email database of the patients and families who have been impacted by your hospital. Include a photo of your organization's president or CEO to personalize the letter. If you send a hard-copy letter, use professional letterhead and a digital handwritten signature.

Internal Communication Tips

Internal Communications

Be sure to utilize a key PR resource you already have: your employees.

Send an Email or Newsletter to Staff

Send an organization-wide email to your staff announcing the good news, including a photo of your leadership with the award. If you have an internal newsletter or intranet, share the good news there as well. Encourage directors and managers to tell employees about the award and what it means for your organization during meetings with their reports. Consider providing a new email signature template for employees to use that has a line about the award.

Example:

Name of Award Recipient

(Hospital Name)

(Name of Award: i.e., 4-Star Customer Service, Top Performer) in (Award Type: i.e., inpatient services, outpatient services) for (Study Type: i.e., Physician Engagement, Patient Experience, Employee Engagement)

(Address, Phone, Email)

Encourage Your Staff to Share the News

Encourage your staff to share the award announcement social posts in order to expand reach and foster pride among employees. Re-share the news of your award from time to time throughout the upcoming year. When using this strategy, make sure you don't re-post immediately after the original post, rather try posting at a different date/time than the original post to reach different users when they're likely to be online.

Host an Employee Celebration

Plan a fun celebration to recognize your staff (and perhaps their families) for their contributions to achieving excellence in patient care and communication. Create a hashtag for the event and encourage employees to share fun photos on social. Give out t-shirts, mugs, or other mementos with a reminder about the award and the pursuit of excellence.

Display Awards Flier

Post our awards flier throughout your organization in prominent patient areas, employee break rooms/ lunch areas, etc. Download and print the 8.5x11 version or the 11x17 version.

You can film your organization's executives discussing what the award means, or you can film staff or even patients who have experienced excellence and can talk about why your facility is deserving of a competitive award like this. Or you could film a behind-the-scenes look to give viewers a peek inside an award-winning facility. Remember it doesn't have to cost a lot to shoot a video, most smartphones have the capacity to shoot HD quality video.

PRC would love if you shared your YouTube and social media videos with us, Awards@PRCExcellence.com.
